Message from the Director

Through our Meaningful and Measurable Objectives initiative, we have targeted families as a critical resource. Scientific evidence shows family-driven plans are more comprehensive and more likely to be implemented than staff-driven plans, and evidenced-based models have shown dramatically lowered recidivism and future incarceration of treated youth in repeated trials.

Juvenile justice has become a primary referral for youths with substance abuse and mental health disorders, and at times, child protection cases are often terminated due to adolescents who get arrested or adjudicated delinquent, and a share of public school students are referred to juvenile justice under zero tolerance policies while having educational disabilities.

To establish and maintain an effective and efficient juvenile justice system in Idaho, systemic needs must be identified. At some point, nothing less should be acceptable than a system that includes a full array of services along a continuum of care that involves key stakeholders and addresses children and families in all of Idaho's communities.

This strategic plan takes into account the value of families, schools, and community stakeholders in the success of our juvenile justice system. I look forward to our continued partnership to prevent and reduce juvenile crime.

Sincerely,

Larry W. Callicutt
Director

An active partnership with communities

Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections

Strategic Plan

Mission

Prevent and reduce juvenile crime in partnership with communities.

Vision

The Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections' vision is a safer Idaho where state, community and family partnerships are creating change by providing balanced systems of prevention, intervention and advocacy through effective management of juvenile offenders.

Values

Balanced and Restorative Justice

Help juveniles become responsible citizens by developing life skills and holding them accountable for restoring their victims and communities while ensuring public safety.

Responsible Partners

We acknowledge our vital role in communities, and we seek to understand and promote a unified relationship among all parties to prevent or stop juveniles from breaking the law.

Communication

We are committed to the practice of full-circle communication in all of our activities.

Teamwork

We recognize that the power of our combined effort exceeds what we can accomplish individually.

Respect

We treat those we serve and one another with respect, and in so doing, demonstrate honesty, integrity, trust, and ethical behaviors.

Excellence and Quality

We are committed to deliver excellence and quality in every aspect of our work by establishing goals and monitoring outcomes, and holding ourselves accountable.

Resource Optimization

We value new ideas and plans which are results-oriented, and we are dedicated to providing training which will develop leaders and maintain a qualified, competent staff.

Cultural Competency

We are committed to becoming more aware of and more understanding of the cultural values of the juveniles, families and other staff with whom we work; in doing so, our aim is to integrate these cultural values and differences in such a manner that we work together to become more effective in our mission.

Authority Statement

The Juvenile Corrections Act was created in 1995 in Title 20 Chapter 5 of the Idaho Code; establishing the Idaho Department of Juvenile Corrections. The intent of this legislation was to base the juvenile corrections system on accountability, community protection and competency development. The model, Balanced and Restorative Justice, focuses on the extent to which harm is repaired, stakeholders are directly involved in decision-making, and communities increase their capacity to respond to crime and conflict.

Community Protection: The citizens of the state of Idaho have a right to be and feel safe from juvenile crime. Although community protection can be enhanced through committing a juvenile to state custody and a reduction in recidivism is a necessary element of success, these provide only a portion of the picture. Community safety will not occur until juvenile offenders acquire skills that help them understand why they must be held accountable for their actions, address the issues that got them into trouble, and increase their competencies to succeed when they return to their communities. These are important considerations for IDJC institutions and contract providers. True community protection comes when the juvenile justice system is woven into the fabric of the community through informal systems of social control in setting clear expectations for and monitoring the behavior of children and youth. IDJC's Community Operations and Programs Services Division help mobilize communities to solve community problems. This includes active engagement and participation, cooperation and collaboration with other systems, including families, the faith communities, and local, county, state and federal agencies. 86% of juveniles in IDJC custody return to their families, working with those families will reduce our recidivism numbers and increase the juvenile's success in reintegration.

Accountability: The juvenile justice system has a two-fold responsibility with respect to juvenile offender accountability. First, juvenile offenders must meet their obligations and second, crime victim's rights must be honored and protected. IDJC is developing victim panels in its institutions, juvenile offenders are writing apology letters and restitution payments while juveniles are in IDJC custody are being researched. All three institutions require the juvenile offenders to perform community service. In order for community service to be considered an effective approach to juvenile crime it should meet community and human needs. Examples include delivering food to the elderly twice a month, working with Fish and Game and the Forest Service.

Competency Development: Competency development is the process where a juvenile offender gains the knowledge and skills necessary to become a productive and law abiding citizen who is a connected member of their community. The skills needed include pro-social, moral reasoning, academic, workforce, and independent living. On average, 40 to 60 percent of our population has Individualized Education Plans (IEPs) for special education. IDJC will continue to enhance education and workforce training opportunities for juvenile offenders. Workforce and training opportunities have also been increased for IDJC staff to improve retention rates and professionalism.
